

INVITATION

Workplace Health and Safety Intensive

With the implementation of new national laws in 2012, it is timely to take stock of where your organisation is currently at in relation to its workplace health and safety status, begin to address the challenges that will arise with the new legislation, and learn or reinforce what to do in the event that a health and safety incident does occur in your workplace.

This full day intensive seminar is designed to address both the practical and theoretical issues arising in workplace health and safety, and is directed towards those companies operating at a more basic level, as well as those companies operating mature workplace health and safety systems. Directors, managers, workplace health and safety professionals, and risk managers will all draw benefit from the sessions being presented.
